The beautiful Georgian house of Belmont, set in its own parkland, amid stunning views of the rolling Kent countryside, is a completely unspoilt and distinctive example of the work of the architect Samuel Wyatt.

Belmont houses objects that reflect 6 generations of continuous occupation by one family, containing wonderful mementos of the family's history and travels - paintings, photograph albums, beautiful Indian and English silverware along with one of the finest private collections of clocks and watches in Britain outside those in the national museums.

The Gardens at Belmont are full of interest throughout every season.

The Kent Police Museum is a free educational and fun experience for the whole family.

Situated in an operational Edwardian police station in the historic market town of Faversham, it explores the history and development of one of the UK's largest police forces.

You can:

- try on real police uniform
- see the evidence that brought Kent criminals to justice in our crime room
- step into our Edwardian cell block and hear about some true 19th century Faversham crimes
- enjoy our interactive displays and handling collection, including a police motorcycle

Originally home of merchant adventurer Henry Hatch before his death in 1533, this historic building at 12 Market Place houses Faversham and Swale's Visitor Information Centre.

Staffed by friendly and helpful Faversham Society volunteers, it offers a mine of local knowledge about the town, its surrounding villages, and the wider county.

We can provide free maps and trails for you to discover local history, and locally-sourced souvenirs to remember your visit. Since the Faversham Society was formed in 1962, we have built up an extensive catalogue of Faversham Papers, which are available at the centre. The centre also hosts the Kent Heritage Bookshop.
